

The coder is exact when it can see a name and fallible when it infers

Share of hand-coded verses on which the machine was right, with exact binomial intervals. 143 verses drawn stratified across five corpora and coded blind to the machine's answer.

Every error but one was a false positive from a pronoun chain running one verse too far.